

Cuba object of complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unidentified Latin American countries are complaining about "significant" Cuban moral and material support for local guerilla insurgency activities, the State Department says.

The allegation was contained in department responses to a series of questions growing out of the announcement last Friday that the United States and Cuba have reached agreement on a limited exchange of diplomats.

The department says its own estimate is that Cuba is not now giving significant material support to guerilla activity in Latin America.

"Nonetheless, this is certainly something we will be watching very closely and which clearly would affect the pace at which the process of normalizing relations moves forward," it said.

The statement did not say what governments in the hemisphere have alleged Cuban support of guerilla activities.

But it said the governments "believe the Cuban government is giving moral and some material support to guerilla activities. They consider it significant."

In the past, charges of Cuban intervention have been leveled by Chile, Uruguay and Paraguay, among others.

U.S. intelligence sources have said that Cuba, under pressure from the Soviet Union, ended its efforts to export revolution in the hemisphere years ago, long before it became involved in military activities in Africa.

In an announcement last Friday, the United States and Cuba disclosed they would exchange diplomats at the subambassadorial level within the next two to three months. The diplomatic exchange would be the first between the two countries in 16 years.

Reaction divided to rescue citations

Recognition at Monday night's City Council session of firemen involved in saving the life of Mrs. Norma Brookman, 2309 East 12th, May 28, met with mixed reviews from her neighbors.

About a dozen persons from the area surrounding the 2300 block of East 12th met with city officials and representatives of the fire department last week to express concern over the department's handling of the incident.

Citizens meeting with officials at that time were concerned with what they considered to be a lack of proper procedure in handling the fire. Specifically, they were disturbed that firemen acted to save Mrs. Brookman only after neighbors directed them to do so.

At that meeting it was brought out that the firemen did not act to rescue Mrs. Brookman immediately upon their arrival, although three calls to the fire department had included the fact that she was still in the house. Other neighbors stated that even after firemen arrived on the scene, they did not rescue Mrs. Brookman until repeatedly asked to do so by neighbors.

In making the presentation of a plaque and letters of recognition Monday night, Mayor Allen Hawkins said, "When you go to a fire it is a team effort."

Firemen who worked that fire and received recognition were: James Anderson, Marty McPherson, Donald Meyer, Charles Dial, Robert Williams and Richard Little. A neighbor, John White, 2305 East 12th, who got firemen to come to Mrs. Brookman's aid, also received a letter of commendation.

A neighbor, Mrs. Lena Fischer, and William Groshans, who both called the fire department, also were recognized.

The citations for the firemen met with applause from the crowd, which included many firemen and their wives.

Hawkins said their performance was "beyond the call of duty." He also said Sedalia is "fortunate to have such dedicated men."

Mrs. Shirley Merk, 2312 East 12th, questioned the precedent set by the presentation. She asked Hawkins when in the past firemen had received such recognition. He could not answer.

"I'm still a little upset with this all," she told the mayor. Mrs. Merk was among the group that originally protested the fire department's handling of the rescue.

Larry Stevenson, Fourth Ward Republican, added: "I'm a little upset too. I agreed to let it die at the meeting at the fire site." Stevenson is chairman of the council fire committee.

Stevenson said later he "cornered" Hawkins about the matter "and he ac-

Council votes against razing old fire station

By DAN POTTER
Staff Writer

In action that cut across party lines Monday night, the City Council voted 4 to 3 not to tear down the old fire station next to the Municipal Building.

First Ward Republican Dr. Robert Vit, Second Ward Democrat Arthur Bethke and Third Ward Democrats Russell Bellamy and Carl Franklin rejected a proposed motion by Fourth Ward Democrat Ray Hendricks to demolish the building, built in 1887, and replace it with a parking lot for the Municipal Building.

Hendricks was joined in the minority by Fourth Ward Republican Larry Stevenson and First Ward Democrat Gary Dey.

Hendricks told the other councilmen that Woodrow Garrison, city building inspector, and two city safety inspectors recommended the building be demolished. The cost of the demolition would be about $10,000, according to Robert Cunningham, director of public works.

Both Stevenson and Dey told the other council members they should follow the recommendation of the inspectors. "We put these men in there to do a job and when they do it and make a report, we reject it," Dey told Franklin.

Mayor Allen Hawkins agreed with Dey. The structure needs to be torn down to provide the space needed to expand the Municipal Building, the mayor explained. "We already have one man with his desk in the hall now."

Space needed

Tuesday morning Hawkins told The Democrat-Capital that no specific plans have been drawn up for a future expansion of the Municipal Building. However, he said, "all of our offices are full now." Hawkins added that the Municipal Building is over-crowded now and should expansion of the building be considered further, the only direction the city could take would be to expand toward the south, where the old fire station now stands.

Hawkins stressed that expansion of the building was mentioned for the first time at Monday's council meeting and that no definite plans exist. He said he was considering future needs only.

"You might be jumping the gun," Franklin told Dey and the mayor. "We all know the building (the fire station) is unsafe, but let's study this thing before we knock it down."

Dr. Vit sided with Franklin, saying, "I know it is not safe for occupancy now, but let's keep it for future renovation. Most cities are restoring these old structures," he said.

Sedalians in the audience sided with Dr. Vit and Franklin.

Mrs. Lillian Wells, 1110 West Seventh, a member of the Pettis County Historical Society, defended saving the building. "It's one of the few buildings in the downtown area with historical significance," she said.

Historical value

Bill Eschbacher, 1017 West Seventh, also came to the defense of the old building, which also served as a city jail from 1887 to 1973, and as a fire station until replaced in 1975 by the Central Fire Station at 600 South Hancock.

"One hundred years from now people won't be impressed with a parking lot, but they will be with a building that was one of the first built in Sedalia," Eschbacher said.

"It's a shame we want to tear down all ties with our past, and I think it is interesting to have the past and present side by side," Eschbacher continued.

Hendricks then made a motion to appropriate funds to level the old structure. Stevenson seconded the move.

But those two found themselves in the minority with Dey after the vote was taken.

Ron Scott, planning and management director, told the council after the vote that if the local historical society can get the building registered as an historical site with the State Historical Society, federal and state funds probably can be obtained to restore the building.

In other action Monday night, the council heard a report from Scott on the proposed sale of KMOS-TV, and listened to another battle about residency requirements for city personnel.

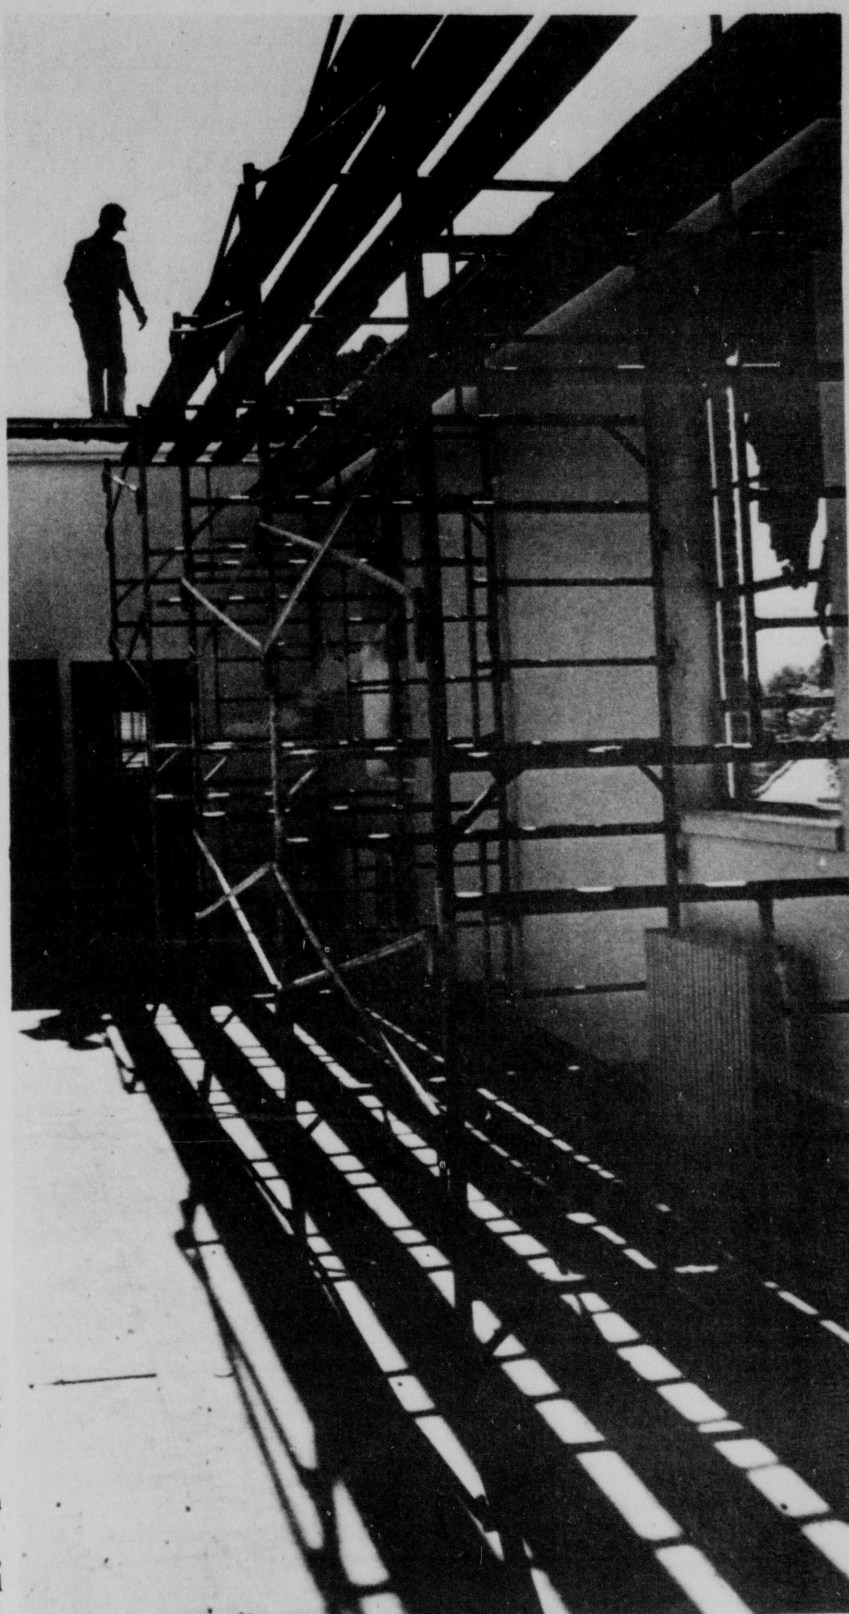

The proposed sale of KMOS had come before the council before and Monday night, as in the past, the council straddled the fence in the controversy by not taking a vote supporting or opposing the sale.

However, Scott told the council there are three possible undesirable alternatives in store for viewers of the local television station.

Three options

Scott said the owners of the station have been trying to sell KMOS locally for eight years with no success. It is evident

Young also includes JFK, LBJ as racists

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said today his criticism of former Presidents Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon as "racists" also applied to Presidents John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson but were not intended as attacks on the individual character of the chief executives.

Testifying before the House International Affairs Committee, Young said the issue of racism was actually "in the context of why we might have neglected Africa" in the formulation of U.S. foreign policy.

The ambassador, who was formerly a black civil rights activist and member of the House, said racism "is a kind of insensitivity to the problems of race and culture, but it is an unfortunate term." Young's remarks concerning Nixon and Ford were published in a Playboy magazine interview.

As Republican criticism of Young expanded, Rep. William S. Broomfield, R-Mich., told the ambassador in today's hearing he considered the reference to Ford "an insult to a very great man" which was deserving of an apology.

Broomfield said he was happy that President Carter had disavowed the remarks. "It isn't healthy for bipartisan foreign policy," Broomfield said.

Committee chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., joined Broomfield in expressing "concern" about the reference to President Ford who also served in the House.

Young replied, "It was in no way limited to Ford. In fact I have maintained contact with him since he left office." Broomfield then asked whether the remark was also true of Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. Young replied, "Yeah, it is. I think I said that somewhere in the article."

The Playboy article, however, did not contain that reference to Kennedy and Johnson.

Talking with reporters this morning after a White House meeting with President Carter about the B1 bomber, Sen. Barry M. Goldwater joined in the Republican attacks on Young. The Arizona senator said Young is putting "both feet, both hands and his hat" in his mouth and should never have been appointed ambassador to the United Nations.

Young meets later today with President Carter to tell him that if the President differs with his statements he should treat Young like an ambassador, not a friend.

On Monday, White House press secretary Jody Powell had said Carter rejected a demand from Republican party chairman Bill Brock that Young apologize or be fired for his remarks about Ford and Nixon. However, Powell said Carter disagreed with Young's characterization of the two Republican presidents.

B1 bomber

Carter weighs options

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who has said the B1 bomber is wasteful and should not be funded, told its congressional supporters today he wants to learn all he can about the advanced bomber before deciding whether it should be built.

At a meeting in the White House Cabinet room this morning with Carter, six Senators and six House members who support the bomber made another attempt to sway Carter from the opposition to the plane he stated during the presidential campaign.

A decision on whether to move ahead with the bomber is due by the end of the month, and the President said he would meet that deadline. He also indicated during the meeting that his options included not only full production or termination of the program but also "several options in between."

Carter told the group that he had devoted a "considerable amount of time" to thinking about the bomber, weighing the United States' over-all defense capabilities, defense purchases, the role of the B52 bomber currently in use, the effectiveness of the cruise missile, and the "general image of whether we are aggressive enough on defense."

"I'm eager to learn all I can about this before I make my own decision," the President said.

Congressional opponents of the B1 were scheduled to meet with Carter on Friday.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday that "nothing has changed" since Carter expressed opposition during the 1976 presidential campaign to production of the bomber.

City bond vote planned

Local residents will vote "as soon as possible" on a $7 million industrial revenue bond issue to finance the construction and equipping of a plant for Waterloo Industries in the Sedalia Industrial Park, Economic Development Director James Hamm said Tuesday.

A four-sevenths majority vote favoring the proposal must be secured to pass the measure. Missouri is one of four states that still requires public votes on revenue bond issues.

The City Council paved the way for such an election Monday night when it passed a resolution supporting the sale of the bonds. Under the industrial revenue bond financing format, the city incurs no monetary risk and local taxes are not increased. The revenue bonds are sold to investors across the country, Hamm explained, "based on the financial strength of the company."

Although it hasn't been firmly decided, Hamm said the revenue bonds would probably be "20-year bonds" in that Waterloo would pay the bonds off, through yearly payments, in two decades. For these first 20 years, technically, the building, equipment and property will be owned by the city. When the bonds are paid off, the city will sell the property to Waterloo "for a token sum," Hamm said.

Because the Waterloo plant and other property technically would be in the city's name until the revenue bonds are paid off, this property will be exempt from taxes because the city cannot tax what it owns. However, Hamm said, negotiations will be underway soon to arrive at a mutually-agreeable arrangement in which, Hamm said, Waterloo "will voluntarily" make yearly payments in lieu of taxes.

Asked why no announcement of the $7 million revenue bond proposal was made in late April, when the company announced its intention to locate in Sedalia, Hamm said the exact method of financing was undecided at that time. Waterloo officials, he indicated, were investigating "various possible avenues" at the time.

Asked if the tax-exempt status created by revenue bond financing figured into this decision, Hamm indicated he thought it probably did.

At Monday night's council meeting, George Berenyi, city Planning and Zoning Commission chairman, criticized this tax break.

no one locally is interested in the purchase, he said, so one of three things will happen.

First, the station owners will "let KMOS go altogether and there will be no television at all," Scott said. Second, "the license will be put up for grabs." That would mean no broadcasts for a long period of time, he explained.

Or, said Scott, "The least of the evils is that CMSU will buy the station."

Scott said he realized local news coverage would be cut back, but educational programs would be offered during the day and public broadcast viewing in the evening, if CMSU ownership is realized.

If the university does not buy the station, he told the councilmen, KMOS will be off the air for a long period of time no matter who is granted the license for its operation.

The council was not asked to vote on the sale as at the past council meetings, nor was the council polled on it Monday night.

However, several councilmen indicated the sale to CMSU was probably the best hope for television viewers in this area.

The issue of a local fireman who resides outside the city limits, but was recently allowed by the council to continue working for the city, caused one Sedalian to complain Monday night.

The fireman in question was allowed to continue working for the fire department because a court ruling and city ordinance requiring city employees to reside in the city was passed after he had moved to Maplewood, a subdivision east of Sedalia. That was a legal exception to the residence requirement under the so-called grandfather clause.

However, Walter Wright, 1020 South New York, told the mayor it created a double standard.

Wright noted that Fred Rose, Route 4, had been an auxiliary policeman for 30 years, but was recently denied an renewal of his commission by Hawkins because he lived outside the city.

Wright contended Rose lived outside the city before the residency requirement rulings and should be granted immunity under the grandfather clause as was the fireman.

Dey agreed with Wright that Hawkins had created a double standard in Rose's case.

But Hawkins disagreed with Dey. The council continued the employment of the fireman, Hawkins noted. "It was their vote that allowed the man to continue with the city, not mine," he said.

Dey said he supported the retention of the fireman, "but so did the mayor in that (closed door) meeting."

"If he supported that, he should support Mr. Rose," Dey said of the mayor. "It's just a personality thing with the mayor," Dey told The Democrat-Capital.

The council also passed a measure amending the ordinance governing city license stickers for automobiles. On a motion proposed by Dey, the council voted to allow residents to be fined $1 per month for each month they are delinquent on purchasing a license.

Also, for all those people who had trees in yards damaged by the May 4 tornado, Scott said a forester with the state Department of Conservation will be at the Municipal Building at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to allocate about 2,000 trees to residents who lost trees. The trees will be planted this fall by city employees funded under a special unemployment program, Scott said.

cepted full responsibility for the whole idea."

Stevenson reacted to the awards by saying: "I'm just a little displeased."

"There was a mistake made," Mrs. Merk said after the meeting. "We accept that. We were asked by Mr. Stevenson, if we wanted a public hearing and we said no. We thought the matter was settled out there (at the fire site)...I say if we had not had that meeting, these plaques would not have been presented."

"I kind of differ with them (neighbors)," said White after the meeting. "I feel they need recognition. Although they didn't do quite right, they were the ones who saved the lady."

He added that he feels the firemen "made a mistake, but they were trying to do the right job. Let's put it this way, if I hadn't gone and grabbed one of the firemen, someone else would have."

Mrs. Helen Moldovan, 2313 East 12th, said she felt Mrs. Fischer should have received as much recognition as the firemen. She said Mrs. Fischer's actions actually saved Mrs. Brookman.

Mrs. Moldovan said she did not oppose the recognition. However, she thought it was "unnecessary."

"We are not against the fire department," said Mrs. Moldovan, "they made a mistake. All we ask is that they correct it."

"It is discriminatory against other industries in Sedalia such as Parkhurst Manufacturing," he said. "I don't want my comments to be interpreted as antagonistic against Waterloo, but some consideration should be given to existing companies who do not have any tax breaks."

Responding to this statement, Hamm "said, "We can't go on an ego trip that this is the best place to build" out of all the other cities and states trying to attract industry, Hamm said, explaining the need for the bonds.

Any tax relief that Waterloo gets will be made up for by the stabilizing effect the added employment will have on the local economy, Hamm continued.

In a related noted, Hamm stated there is no limit to the amount of revenue bonds a city may approve.

Since the concept was first introduced in the 1940s, Hamm said, industrial revenue bonds have become "very well-accepted means of financing industrial expansion...because there is no legal or moral obligation on the part of the city to make any payment should a default occur."

He also noted that it would not be feasible to attempt to sell revenue bonds in this case if Waterloo was not regarded in the investment world as a strong, stable company. "As I've said before," Hamm stated, "revenue bonds are sold on the strength of the company." The local economic development program has grown to the point where "we have been allowed to be more selective...the firms we are dealing with are financially very strong."

Health food advocate practices preventive maintenance

By BEVERLY ESSER
Living Today Editor

Mention that a person is a vegetarian or that he eats health foods, and many people will conjure up a picture of a skinny little person who eats only nuts and berries and has kind of a wild look in his eyes. That is not necessarily the case. Take Philip Allen, 2400 Dennis Road, for example. He is a vegetarian, although he does eat dairy products and absolutely strict vegetarians don't. His diet basically consists of unprocessed foods without additives and preservatives. "Marketing procedures in America cause a need for preservatives. Manufacturers produce such large quantities and warehouse foods for months and months. If they don't put the preservatives in, the food deteriorates and spoils," Allen said.

Polly's pointers

Old brass takes a shine

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I want to pass the following on to the reader who wants to know how to clean her alabaster doves. A person who sells such items once told me to clean them with rubbing alcohol or cornstarch. Apply with a cotton tipped stick. — MRS. R.S.

DEAR READERS and Mrs. R. S. — The use of rubbing alcohol is new to me. I have never heard it recommended before, so try a small corner first and see the effect. Cornstarch, talcum powder and baking soda are frequently recommended but never put alabaster in water. I have been told that some of the alabaster figurines now sold in Italy are a synthetic composition so are washable but one would want to be sure. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I never throw away empty postal stamp books but save them to tape change in when ordering patterns and other such things. Take the sealed envelope to the Post Office to be sure of the correct amount of postage but I find most times only a thirteen cent stamp is required. — FRANCES.

DEAR POLLY — With prices so high most of us are interested in saving on coffee any way we can. The following is the way I have been making a pound of coffee last almost a month. I keep the used grounds in a plastic container in the refrigerator until I have about three-quarters of a pound. Then I spread the grounds out on a cookie sheet and put it in the oven for about an hour. During this time I remove them (in about half an hour) just long enough to stir the grounds and release the steam. I always do this when I am using the oven for other baking needs. When coffee is removed it should air dry for about three hours. Stir often. When the spoon comes out clear and dry put in a GLASS jar. When using these grounds I put in two new spoons of coffee with two of the rebaked and start from scratch. One can experiment to get the strength they like, always cutting down on the fresh ground. — EDNA.

DEAR POLLY — I know the following is a good Pointer, since I have spent many hours trying to remove stains from bathtubs. After using many things with no success I tried using catsup. It was spread where the stains were, let stand for a few hours and then washed away with warm water. The tub was clean and white. — LILLIAN.

DEAR POLLY — To clean hair brushes I rinse them thoroughly in cold water to which I have added a generous amount of ammonia. I shake them and put in the open air to dry and the ammonia removes the dirt like magic.

When paint brushes have paint dried on them I clean them by letting the brushes simmer in white vinegar for about 10 minutes. — E.G.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — Does anyone know how to restore a brass bucket? Mine is very old, battered and dark. No one would ever know it is brass. My bucket is very large and cleaning it would be quite a job but my mother and I remember it being so pretty and shiny when I was a girl some sixty years ago. — HELEN.

DEAR HELEN — If at all possible do have your bucket professionally cleaned and polished and the dents hammered out as much as possible. After such a cleaning and polishing ask that it be lacquered so it will stay shiny and not require constant polishing. Doing it yourself would be possible but a long and hard task. It would doubtless require several scrubbing with a household cleanser to remove as much dirt and black as you can and then more than one polishing with a good commercial brass polish. There would be no comparison in the end results and think of all the hard work required to achieve even passable results. — POLLY.

Healthful crepes

Increase speed as berries are added and blend at high speed until smooth paste. Spread fruit filling on crepes about 1/2-inch thick. Fold crepes over and serve.

- TUNA SALAD
- 3 tablespoons plain low-fat yogurt
 - 3 tablespoons safflower mayonnaise
 - 3 teaspoons lemon juice
 - 1/4 teaspoon celery seed
 - 1 teaspoon instant onion if desired
 - 1 can (10 ounces) drained, water-packed tuna

Mix all ingredients except tuna, then add to tuna. Stuff tomatoes with tuna salad and place on lettuce bed. Garnish with parsley or green pepper rings.

VEGETABLE DIP

Blend two small jars pimenton to cheese spread with grated sharp cheddar cheese. Add enough prepared powdered milk to make a smooth spread. Use carrot slices, celery sticks and cauliflower to dip.

SPRING VEGETABLE DISH

Saute desired quantities of fresh broccoli, diced celery, cauliflower flowerettes and mushrooms with frozen green lima and pea pods in two tablespoons corn oil or margarine. Add two tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup water and salt to taste. Simmer approximately 10 minutes. Vegetables should be crisp and bright in color. Soy sauce is a suggested table seasoning.

- Most health food advocates, or at least those who subscribe to the preventive maintenance theory, don't think of vitamin pills as a cure-all in themselves, but use the pills as a supplement to eating properly.
- The uninitiated might think that a diet of natural foods might be dull and unappetizing. However Allen and his wife, Sue, emphasized that with a little imagination the food is very tasty.
- Mrs. Allen shared several of her recipes including one for whole wheat bread that is delicious with unsalted homemade butter. The six Allen children (the seventh is due in July) really like the bread.

- WHOLE WHEAT BREAD
- 2 tablespoons natural yeast
 - 1/2 cup warm (not hot) water
 - 1 cup lukewarm prepared powdered milk
 - 2 teaspoons salt
- YOGURT-FRUIT CREPES
- 1 egg
 - 1 3/4 cup prepared powdered milk
 - 2 1/2 teaspoons corn oil
 - 1 1/4 cup unbleached white flour

- 1 teaspoon raw sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Beat the egg. Add remaining ingredients and beat until smooth. Put enough batter in heated skillet to cover approximately 1/4 inch thick. Cook until bubbles appear, turn and brown other side.

Fruit filling: Blend 3/4 cup plain yogurt and 2 to 3 tablespoons unfiltered honey (to taste) at low speed in a blender. Gradually add 2 cups frozen unsweetened berries (strawberries, black berries or blueberries, etc.)

SWISS POTATOES

A variation of the famous Swiss dish, Roesti.

1 1/2 pounds (4 medium) potatoes

Salt and pepper to taste

1/4 cup salad oil

1 tablespoon butter

1/2 cup grated (medium-fine) Swiss cheese

Scrub potatoes; do not peel, cover with boiling salted water and boil, covered, until partly cooked — 15 minutes. Drain, chill, peel and coarsely grate; season with salt and pepper. In a heavy 10-inch skillet heat the oil; stir in the butter. Add half the potatoes and spread evenly; sprinkle with the cheese; add the remaining potatoes in an even layer. Over medium-low heat cook, uncovered, until underside is well-browned and crusty. Invert a large plate over the potatoes and turn out; slide back into skillet; brown underside. Cut in 4 wedges and remove with a wide spatula. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

"Let's talk dry cleaning"

By CRAIG WHITE

Many people never give a thought to moths until they see one flying around...and that's one moth you don't have to worry about. That is, it's the pre-flight moth (the larva) that makes a meal happily on good woollens and furs.

Right now you're checking your summer wardrobe and putting winter things away...and that's a good time to bring them to us for cleaning and mothproofing. All clothes should be cleaned before storage. It not only removes soiling that could otherwise damage the fabric, but any moth eggs or larvae will also be removed.

Expert mothproofing is part of our service, and we also offer storage for your fine winter garments to save you closet space and give you peace of mind.

If you keep clothes at home for storage, they should still be cleaned first. Mothballs are effective for home storage though they do have the drawback of the strong odor. But better than a moth for the moths.

Rhodesia is outside Carter's morality

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It was a small act of strangulation that took place on May 27 — nothing more than a little lynching, really. It was only a principle that was throttled. Jimmy Carter killed the Rhodesian Information Service by cutting off its funds. Ho-hum, and what else is news?

Kilpatrick

Merely by lifting a finger in the UN Security Council, Mr. Carter's pet ambassador, Andrew Young, could have prevented this shameful act. To have permitted the Rhodesian Information Service to continue its operations would have cost our government nothing. It would have served the ideal of free press and free speech. This is not an ideal that greatly concerns Mr. Carter.

Thus Mr. Carter passed the word to let the execution proceed. Mr. Young cheerfully joined in making the May 27 resolution unanimous. The Security Council thereby called on all member states "to prohibit the use or transfer of any funds in their territories by the illegal regime in Southern Rhodesia, for the purpose of any office or agency of the illegal regime that is established within their territories..." And that was that.

The resolution had but one purpose. It was designed deliberately to still the last remaining voice speaking for the Ian Smith government in Salisbury. Henceforth, we are to have propaganda from the several Marxist and terrorist outfits trying to seize power; we will hear interminably from Ambassador Young. But access to official Rhodesian texts, documents and reports is effectively foreclosed.

What a mockery is this! In his May 22 address at Notre Dame University, Mr. Carter eloquently proclaimed his dedication to "a foreign policy that is based on our fundamental values." Evidently, a free press is not among Mr. Carter's fundamental values. Mr. Carter said his policies would be based on "constant decency." Whereupon, on May 27, Mr. Carter did an indecent thing. At Notre Dame, Mr. Carter was all for "freedom." He placed freedom among man's "fundamental spiritual requirements." But he did not mean to embrace freedom for a small, dissenting voice.

The Rhodesian Information Service has operated for the past 10 years out of a modest house at 2852 McGill Terrace in Washington. In deference to the quiet neighborhood, Director Kenneth Towsey did not fly a Rhodesian flag. He did not even have the service's name on the door. He and John Hooper, with three clerical helpers, tended quietly to their business. For several years, Towsey's lovely daughter Virginia helped out.

They made no ripples, created no sensations, aroused no animosities. They simply distributed official material from Salisbury, answered inquiries, assisted the press. Towsey made a number of speeches to service clubs, schools and colleges. Except at Harvard University, that bastion of free inquiry, he was well received. At Harvard a gang of black fascists physically prevented his speaking, by invitation, to the Harvard Law School Forum.

Towsey is 57, a slender, wiry fellow with the immaculate manners of a British diplomat and the sizzling forehead of a blue-ribbon tennis player. He and his family have accepted the ostracism of social Washington without a murmur. His own plans are uncertain. He may take early retirement and remain in the United States as a resident alien. He will remain, that is, unless Jimmy Caesar orders him deported.

Towsey's last press statement was completely in character. He carefully quoted the operative language of the UN resolution. He temperately questioned the statesmanship of the United States' action "at a time when the Rhodesian government is cooperating fully with an Anglo-American initiative designed to resolve the conflict in Rhodesia." He thanked members of Congress, the press, and the American people for the privilege of providing them with information and for the sympathy and good will that many persons have manifested toward him. Then he added one wry sentence:

"It is my great regret that these sentiments have not prevailed at least sufficiently to permit the continued exercise of the freedoms that the First Amendment of your Constitution seems to promise."

Towsey regrets this, and so do I, and so do most American editors. But Jimmy Carter, you can depend on it, will not shed a tear.

The new list of books

WASHINGTON—I went out to San Francisco last week to the American Bookseller's Convention to flog a new book I have coming out in the fall. (Modesty prevents me from telling the title.) At least 15,000 book buyers, bookstore owners, publishers, editors and promotion people were there, and I would estimate at least 10,000 new titles were being pushed.

Buchwald

I can't remember all of the titles, but as I went from booth to booth I got some idea of what awaits the book reader this fall.

The first booth I stopped at, the salesman said:

"Here is a free copy of the book of the year, 'How to Perform Your Own Heart Transplant Operation.' You save $3,000 by cutting out the middleman."

"You mean the doctor?"

"Doctor, heart surgeon—whatever you call him. The book tells you everything from where to find a donor to how to deal with vascular rejection."

I went to the next booth and was handed a book entitled, "How to Make a Million Dollars in Real Estate and Have Sex at the Same Time."

"This is a racy title," I said.

"It's a self-help book. Many real estate agents make a lot of money, but they're very shy about sex."

"This book helps them overcome their inhibitions, particularly when they're showing an unfurnished house. As you notice it's chock-full of illustrations. The author feels real estate people have to come out of the closet."

A few booths down a man was autographing books. He was apparently a psychologist because the title of his work was "Releasing Inner Energy by Biting Your Fingernails." When he saw I was a reporter he explained his theory. "All lifegiving energy starts in the fingernails. Most people have pent-up energy, really electric charges, that has to be released before they explode. By biting your fingernails you make it possible for the energy to escape out through your hands, which relaxes the joints in your knuckles and gets you through the day." He gave me an autographed copy, which I read on the plane—and much to my amazement it worked.

Two aisles down I found a publisher's rep pushing a book entitled "The Joy of Oil Spills," which tells people how to have fun when a tanker goes aground off their beach. It shows you how to build tar castles out of oil and sand, how to swim through an oil spill and still breathe and how to organize a fish fry from all the fish that have rolled up on the beach.

A few booths down I found "The Idi Amin Book of Etiquette," "Confessions of an Oral Surgeon," "The Last Chance Food Stamp Diet Book," "Dating Jackie Onassis on $5 a Day" and "Is There an IRS After Death?"

Christmas shoppers can expect many supernatural books this fall. One that caught my eye was entitled "Anita's Baby." The plot concerned a child who drank nothing but Florida orange juice and found himself wanting to be a woman. He has a trans-sexual operation and winds up winning the women's tennis singles at Wimbledon.

The success of "Roots" has forced many publishers to come out with their own versions. One was entitled "Leaves" and told of a WASP's search for his roots over a period of 12 years. He remembered his grandmother sitting on the porch in Southampton repeating a story about her great-grandfather who founded the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Taking a $50,000 advance from his publisher, he went to New Jersey, and there in a small village called South Orange he found the very place his great-great-great-grandfather had come from. The people of South Orange were so happy to meet one of their own that they made him a member of their country club for life.

The author is now suing his publisher for $5 million because he couldn't find "Leaves" in any New Jersey bookstore.

Defector describes terror in Uganda

The lid has been lifted on the horrors of Idi Amin's Uganda.

Henry Kyemba, President Amin's minister of health and a close personal friend for 20 years, defected to Great Britain the other day and started talking. Although everyone by now knows what goes on in Uganda, Kyemba's report is one of the most authoritative to come out of the country.

Kyemba said he could not dispute an estimate from the International Commission of Jurists that as many as 100,000 people have been killed in Uganda since Amin seized power six years ago.

"The country is littered with bodies," said Kyemba, adding that even Amin himself probably doesn't know how many people he has had killed.

Kyemba confirmed that Amin had ordered the murder of Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum, supposedly the victim of an "auto accident." Mrs. Dora Bloch, the Israeli-British grandmother who was left behind after the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport last July, also was slain by Amin's security police, said Kyemba.

Saying that people are being murdered in Uganda every day, Kyemba expressed the hope that his revelations would help reduce the slaughter.

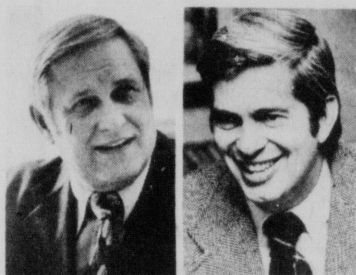

Another thing that might help would be for the United States to direct some of its moral indignation toward Uganda. UN Ambassador Andrew Young would be the logical one to do this, but so far as we can recall none of his celebrated comments have been pointed in this direction. Nor has President Carter used his office to condemn Amin's actions.

This same curious silence pertains when it comes to Cambodia, where the Communist leadership has been carrying out a policy of genocide unseen since Hitler, or the collectivization of China. Not a peep of protest has come forth from the Carter administration.

There seems to be a tacit understanding that the U.S. will wink at atrocities committed by those of yellow or dark skin, reserving its umbrage for white racists, who seem to be the exclusive recipients of our selective outrage these days.

"Clean out the still, Zeke — we're gonna be rich!"

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The controversial pardoning of Richard Nixon aborted the trial of the century. Had it not been for the pardon, according to inside sources, the special prosecutor definitely would have indicted the former president for obstruction of justice.

Instead of the epic court drama, Nixon has now presented his case to the nation via television. He told interviewer David Frost that he considered himself under oath. If Nixon had really sworn to tell the truth, he could be indicted for perjury. We counted at least a dozen misstatements.

Perhaps the most dramatic was Nixon's account of the pardon itself. From the private notes and recollections of the man who negotiated the pardon on President Ford's behalf, we can now cite the discrepancies.

Thanks for the time

The open meeting held by First Ward Councilmen Vit and Dey at Liberty Park on Thursday evening prompts me to comment on recent observations of our city government.

I feel we are very fortunate to have councilmen who give so generously of their time and who are genuinely concerned about the citizens of Sedalia. This extends also to the mayor and councilmen from the other wards.

Merry-go-round

Truth was dodged in Nixon interviews

Becker, kept a careful record of his visit to San Clemente in September, 1974, to discuss the pardon and the disposition of the Nixon tapes. Becker flew to California with the ex-president's attorney Herbert J. Miller. Although they arrived shortly before midnight, they immediately went into a three-hour huddle with Nixon aide Ronald Ziegler.

The talks resumed the following morning in Ziegler's office. Frequently, Ziegler and Miller slipped out of the room for whispered consultations.

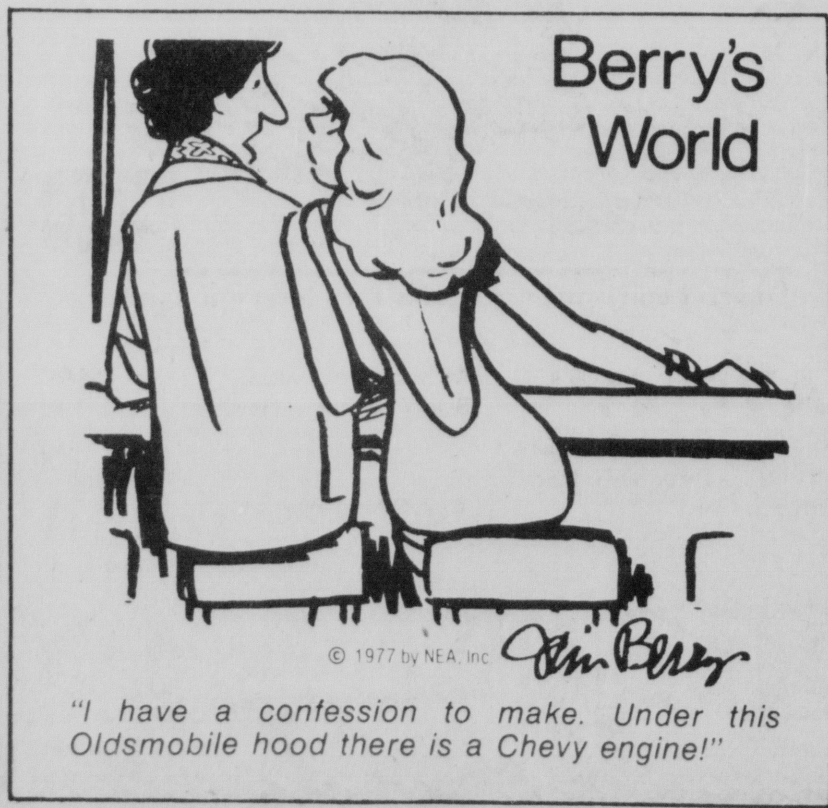

Nixon later told David Frost that a pardon "isn't, of course...necessarily an admission of guilt." This idea, he said, was "legalistic pettifoggery."

On the contrary, Becker made plain to Nixon's negotiators before the pardon was granted that it would constitute an admission of guilt. He even provided Miller with the leading Supreme Court decision on the question — a 1915 case involving a newsman who refused to testify.

When our elected city officials are attending special council meetings and committee meetings three or four nights a week as ours have recently, I believe they deserve our thanks for their conscientious attitude even though, quite naturally, they cannot always please everyone in their actions.

Ruling might quicken state prison decision

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A federal lawsuit brought by three Missouri State Penitentiary inmates against the state for overcrowded prisons nearly two years ago may be given a boost by a recent Oklahoma federal court ruling.

Last month, U.S. District Court Judge Luther Bohanon in Oklahoma City ordered that Oklahoma's prison population be cut by about 1,000. Crowding at the two state prisons, the judge ruled, constituted cruel and unusual punishment and is therefore barred by the U.S. Constitution.

And although corrections officials there say they will appeal the decision, the St. Louis office of the American Civil Liberties Union believes the case may help it represent the three Missouri prisoners. That suit, in turn, may put pressure on the Missouri Legislature, which has been slow in moving to relieve overcrowded prisons.

As the inmates' attorney, the ACLU is asking that no more inmates be admitted to the state penitentiary until the population is reduced to less than one man per cell. Since that case was filed, some 1,400 inmates have been added to the statewide prison population — with no increase in permanent facilities.

"We're not asking that new penitentiaries be built," says Joyce Armstrong, executive director of the ACLU in St. Louis. "That's not up to us, that's up to the state. But something is going to have to be done."

State House and Senate conferees have been meeting this week in an attempt to agree on whether an urban, medium-security prison or a mid-Missouri, maximum-security prison should be built. The conference committee failed to reach an agreement Monday, but was to continue work today.

But even as legislators haggle over the proposed prison, new inmates continue to be committed—at a rate of about 60 a month, corrections officials say. By next winter, they believe the inmate population will exceed the total operating capacity, that is, two inmates per cell.

Most of the points the ACLU brought up in the 1975 suit have already been rectified by corrections officials, Mrs. Armstrong said. Included in the original suit were allegations of inadequate medical treatment in the prison, insufficient numbers of guards and the practice of prison officials screening legal documents filed by inmates.

Only one point in the suit remains to be contested: Does overcrowding in the state's prison system constitute cruel and unusual punishment? That will be taken up by U.S. District Court Judge Elmo Hunter in Kansas City in September.

Oklahoma state officials, including Gov. David Boren, charged the federal judge there with "usurpation of the powers of state government" in making his ruling that the prison population be reduced.

But the federal court's willingness to speak out on matters involving prison overcrowding was pointed up last week when Kansas City area federal court Judge John W. Oliver criticized the Missouri Legislature in a 74-page opinion on a case involving a man detained in the Platte County jail for more than a year.

Oliver said the state "continues to ignore the problem created by its consistent legislative neglect" in decisions on prisons. He referred to recent delays in a decision on the Clay County site for a medium-security prison, delays which occurred when the Senate slashed money for that prison from the state budget, and replaced it with money for a maximum-security prison to be built in mid-Missouri.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale has held off the final purchase of the land until the legislature makes a decision on the matter.

Mother to get children back

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Mary Ann Corsey, who lost custody of her two children because she was dating the black man who became her second husband, expects to have the kids back by next weekend.

The state Supreme Court ruled Monday that a county court had taken the children away solely on racial considerations.

"I just hope other people in our situation don't have to go through what we've had to go through," Mrs. Corsey said in a telephone interview from her home in Clovis. "I hope people will be more open-minded and broad-minded."

Mrs. Corsey, 31, first won custody of Kimberly, now 7, and Darion, 6, when she and Danny Boone were divorced in December 1975. Six months later, Boone went to Curry County District Court, asking for custody of the youngsters because his ex-wife was dating Ben Corsey.

Judge James Compton, now retired, granted Boone custody, saying the relationship between the former Mrs. Boone and Corsey was "immoral, a bad influence on the children and an improper atmosphere to raise minor children."

He also said the children would be better reared with members of their own race.

Boone, a truck driver who is frequently away on trips, placed the children in the home of his ex-wife's brother, a farmer.

The New Mexico Supreme Court said that the lower court's decision was based solely on racial considerations and restored the original custody order.

"The record is barren of any evidence" of immorality or other harm to the children because of the interracial marriage, said District Court Judge Maurice Sanchez of Albuquerque, who was designated to sit on the three-judge Supreme Court panel hearing the custody fight appeal.

"The record, in fact, discloses clear and convincing evidence that Mary Ann and Ben have been circumspect in their relationship and at no time have acted in a way harmful to the children's welfare," Sanchez said.

Mrs. Corsey said that she had a hard time seeing the children after she lost custody. "We've got a problem with my brother," she said.

In contrast, she said, they have had no problems with people in their community.

"I know people here have been pulling for us, the business people and our friends," Mrs. Corsey said.

Bill sent to Teasdale curbs land sales by MU

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Legislative approval would be needed before the University of Missouri may sell large tracts of land under a bill sent to Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale by the Missouri Senate late Monday.

The bill is designed to keep MU officials from selling for development purposes a wooded, 8,000-acre parcel at Weldon Spring near St. Charles. The Senate voted 28-4 to approve the measure, which had been approved earlier in the House.

The House added a section requiring the university to seek competitive bids before selling any timber or other natural resource located on the property.

The requirement was the result of the university's sale of $189,000 worth of timber on the Weldon Spring tract to a lumberman who paid the institution only $40,000 for the logs.

The university had looked into the possibility of selling the land to a developer for industrial or residential construction, but that plan drew fire from state lawmakers who said it should be preserved as a park area for St. Louis area residents and the state.

Since the controversy first began, the Department of Conservation has indicated a willingness to purchase the land to keep it in its natural state.

The Senate also approved a House-passed measure which would have the state paying the entire cost of foster care services. Some of the costs are currently borne by counties.

The bill, which would cost $2.4 million when fully implemented two years from now, goes back to the House for further consideration, since the Senate tacked on amendments providing the bill goes into effect Jan. 1, 1978, and providing that rules regarding the foster care program by the Division of Family Services be reviewed by the legislature before Nov. 30, 1981.

Sent to the governor was a measure allowing the Bi-State Development Agency in St. Louis to increase from 6 per cent to 8 per cent the interest which it may pay on its revenue bonds. Bi-State said it needed the rate increase to help fund construction of parking garages and other transportation facilities in downtown St. Louis.

The Senate rejected, however, a bill making the state's boating safety regulations more stringent.

Win 4-3 in 10th

Cards come back to whip Padres

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Left-handed hitter Keith Hernandez has a good thing going against left-handed pitchers and hopes to keep it that way.

Thus the young St. Louis first baseman chose his words with care after delivering the winning hit in a 4-3 Cardinals triumph over the San Diego Padres Monday night.

"There are too many guys around this league who would love to find out what I had to say about what I hit so they could nail me the next time," cautioned Hernandez following his single off southpaw Dave Tomlin, 1-3, in the 10th inning of the National League game.

"He's a left-handed pitcher and he's out there to rub me out," said Hernandez. "I just took a guess on what I hit. I know what the book is on me around the league. With a left-handed pitcher throwing you've got to stay in. I think I'm hitting left-handers for an average better than right-handers.

Hernandez, whose blow was his third off San Diego southpaws in four trips to the plate, was accurate in his appraisal of his hitting.

But in addition to the single, raising his average against left-handers to .347, two other drives by the Cards proved equally damaging.

Ted Simmons slammed a one-out Rollie Fingers pitch off the left field wall for a double in the eighth, enabling St. Louis to gain a 2-2 tie.

And moments before in the 10th, after Bobby Valentine's double edged the Padres in front again, Garry Templeton followed Lou Brock's single and stolen base with a bad hop hit over the glove of San Diego shortstop Bill Almon to produce a 3-3 deadlock.

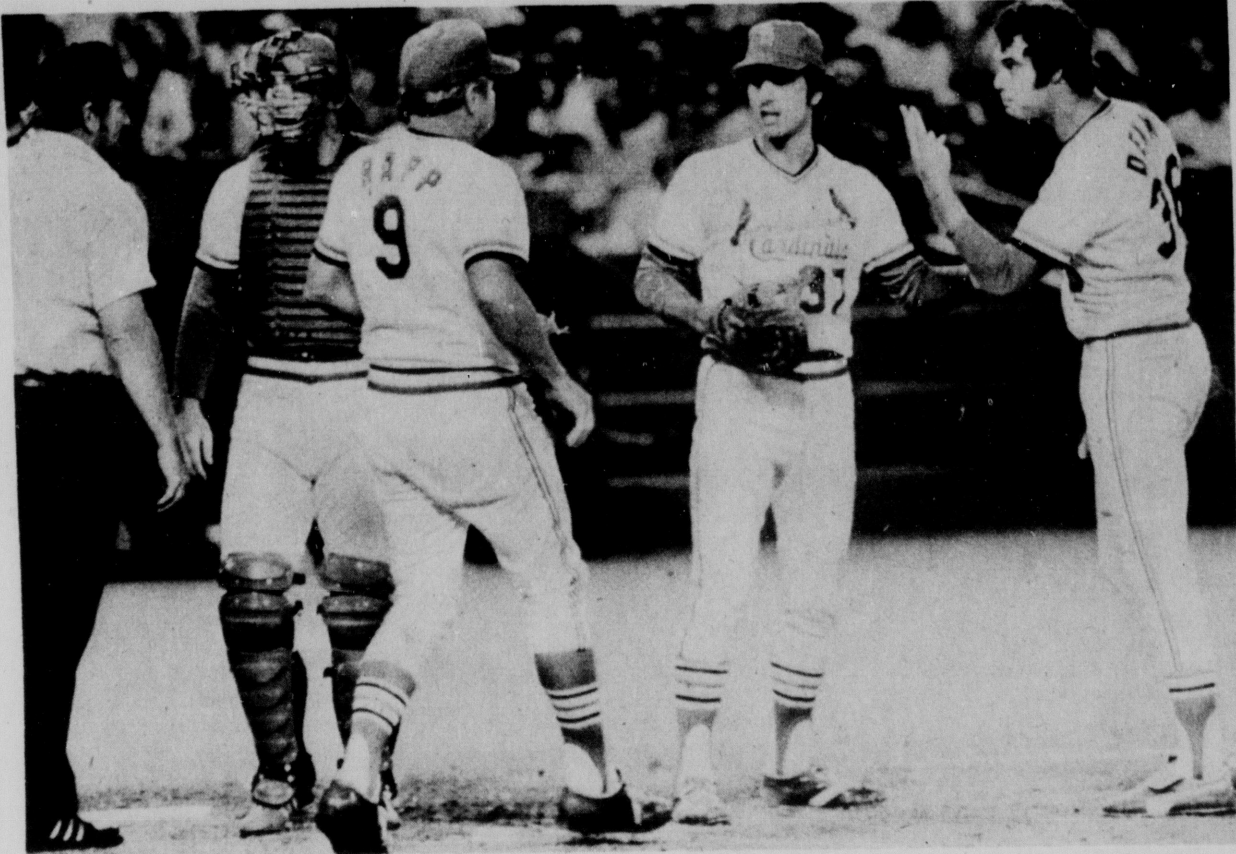

Tomlin, the Padres' third pitcher, issued an intentional walk to Simmons after Tony Scott's sacrifice bunt advanced Templeton to second base. Hernandez then let Tomlin fall behind on a 3-1 count and rammed his hit into right field over the head of second baseman Gary Sutherland.

"I'd rather hit 3-1 than 2-0. I don't want to be behind," explained Hernandez, still remaining succinct following a victory which interrupted a four-game Cards losing streak.

Unbeaten St. Louis righthander John Denny, who was rocked by Mike Ivie's two-run homer while bidding for his eighth triumph, was thumbed out of the contest in the seventh inning during a bitter protest over a pitch on which San Diego's Gene Richards walked.

"Go ask him," snapped an angry Denny long after his dispute with Plate Umpire Jim Quick. "When he went out to the mound he cussed me," claimed Quick.

Disputed call

Cardinal hurler John Denny, right, continues to argue with plate umpire Jim Quick, after Quick threw Denny out of the game in the seventh inning of Monday night's game. Catcher Ted Simmons also argues with Quick, as manager Vern Rapp and first baseman Keith Hernandez step in to restrain Denny. Denny was thrown out while protesting a pitch on which San Diego's Gene Richards walked.

Tiant shuts out K.C. on five hits

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Luis Tiant, like the Cuban cigars he favors, just gets better with age.

That's why the veteran righthander casually shrugs off the annual lament that he has outlived his usefulness to the Boston Red Sox.

"Year after year, they talk about my age," says Tiant. "They said that last year and I came back and won 21 games."

The 36-year-old hurler has had his problems this season but, after pitching the Boston Red Sox to a 1-0 win over the Kansas City Royals Monday night, he was not discounting another 20-win campaign.

"You never can say how many you can win, but this year we have a better team than last year," he said.

"I might lose five in a row like last year. But I came back and went 11-2 in the last half."

Tiant, 3-4, used his herky-jerky delivery to silence the Royals on just five hits before reliever Bill Campbell finished up the last two innings.

The victory was his 100th since joining the Red Sox in 1971, but only his first since April 30 and just his fourth in 13 tries against Kansas City.

Carl Yastrzemski, Boston's 37-year-old left fielder, provided the margin of victory with his ninth home run of the season, a seventh-inning shot into the right field bullpen.

"The two youngsters did it for us again, Yastrzemski and Tiant," smiled Manager Don Zimmer.

"That's what we've been waiting for, good pitching. We've been getting it the last 10 days except for Luis' outs. When we get good pitching we're going to be tough."

Kansas City starter Dennis Leonard, 3-6, was saddled with the loss although he went the distance and matched Tiant and Campbell by doling out just five hits.

But the Royals were unable to take advantage of Tiant's early wildness and stranded 11 base runners, including three in the sixth. Kansas City got the leadoff man on base six times to no avail.

"That's the best that Leonard's pitched all year," admitted Herzog after the Royals finished their fifth straight one-run game. "But we just can't get it going."

Top pick in '76 draft offers a little advice

NEW YORK (AP) — If Floyd Bannister could sit down today and talk with the No. 1 choice in baseball's amateur free-agent draft, he'd have plenty to say.

"The first thing I'd tell him would be 'congratulations,' because it's quite an honor," said Bannister, who was the No. 1 choice in the draft a year ago. "Then I'd tell him to work hard and do the best you can."

Royals have 22nd pick in free agent draft

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals, picking in inverse order of the way they finished last season, choose in the 23rd position today when the annual June Free Agent Draft begins.

The draft will be conducted via a telephone hookup with the commissioner's office in New York beginning at 11 a.m. The Royals draft 22nd in the secondary phase.

Players eligible for drafting in the regular phase include high school graduates, junior college players, players who have finished their junior year or graduated from four-year institutions, players past 21 years of age or those who were

Don't worry about what people say. Hold your head up high and don't worry about the pressure."

Bannister, however, won't be available for that little talk. He is otherwise occupied as the Houston Astros' probable pitcher tonight in Philadelphia.

tions currently playing in the major leagues. The others are Rick Monday, Tim Lincecum, Jeff Burroughs, Mike Ivie and Bill Almon. Another, Ron Blomberg, is on the disabled list.

"I was drafted right before the College World Series," said Bannister. "It really was a thrill. I knew I would go high but you can't really expect to be No. 1."

Pitching with the added burden of being the top amateur selection in the nation, Bannister beat Arizona in the first round of the College Series but then lost to Eastern Michigan. Arizona State finished third in the tournament.

"After it was over, I was tired, mentally and physically," said Bannister. "I took about a month off before I signed."

His early experiences as a professional were a melange of towns and teams in baseball's minor-league network. Today's No. 1 choice might be interested in the play-by-play.

"I started in Covington, Va., in the Appalachian League," he said. "I pitched 13 innings there with 27 strikeouts and no runs."

National League action

Expos down Braves 4-2

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

Pitchers may be notoriously bad hitters, but Jackie Brown carries that to extremes.

As a matter of fact, the last time Brown got a hit, he was playing for a team which no longer counts itself among the major league's active members — the Washington Senators.

"I guess the last hit I got was with the Senators in 1971 against the White Sox ... I even think I was two-for-three," Brown boasted.

But after six years, Brown is back in the hitting groove. His first hit since 1971 drove home the Expos' second run and helped Montreal defeat the Atlanta Braves 4-2 Monday night.

In other National League action, San Francisco edged Pittsburgh 3-1 in 12 innings. St. Louis nipped San Diego 4-3 in 10 innings. Chicago defeated Los Angeles 3-1. Philadelphia whipped Houston 9-5 in a six-inning rain-shortened game, and the game between Cincinnati and New York was postponed by rain.

"It shocked me as much as it did him," Brown said, referring to his run-scoring hit off Atlanta starter Frank LaCorte that gave the Expos a 2-0 lead. Brown held the Braves hitless for 5 2-3 innings until Barry Bonnell singled past shortstop Chris Speier with two out in the sixth.

Gary Carter gave the Expos a 1-0 lead in the second, belting his 10th home run. Brown's single made it 2-0 later in the inning and the Expos added two runs in the fourth.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 1
Rick Reuschel pitched 6 1-3 strong innings and relief ace Bruce Sutter gained his 16th save as Chicago defeated Los Angeles, moving 1½ games ahead of Pittsburgh in the National League East.

The Cubs got two runs off

Burt Hooton, 4-3, in the third inning on Bill Buckner's single and Jerry Morales' sacrifice fly. They added a run in the seventh off reliever Stan Wall on a walk, an error and a single by Bobby Murcer.

Giants 3, Pirates 1, 12 innings
Darrell Evans and Mike Sadek doubled home 12th-inning runs off Pittsburgh relief ace Rich Gossage, giving San Francisco the victory.

Willie McCovey's ninth homer of the season in the second inning off John Candelaria gave the Giants a 1-0 lead.

The Pirates, held scoreless through eight innings by rookie Bob Knepper, tied the score with a ninth-inning run.

Kings trade for Allen, send Johnson to L.A.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Lucius Allen comes home and Ollie Johnson moves west in a trade that gives the Los Angeles Lakers an embarrassment of first-round draft riches.

The Lakers, who were defeated by Portland in the opening rounds of the National Basketball Association playoffs, sent Allen to the Kansas City Kings Monday in return for Johnson, a backup forward, and the Kings' first and second-round draft picks in 1978.

Allen, who was playing out his option with Los Angeles, would have become a free agent Monday. He signed a four year contract with the Kings. The terms were not disclosed.

The Lakers, who have three first-round picks in this week's NBA draft, will now have three more first-round selections in next year's dispersal of college talent.

Allen, a play-making guard, first gained fame as the finest player ever to come out of Kansas when he starred at Wyandotte High School in Kansas City, Kan., a decade ago.

He went on to UCLA and teamed with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. He and Jabbar later played together at Milwaukee and Los Angeles.

"It's really going to be different," Allen said from his home in Los Angeles. "It was fun playing with Kareem all those years, but now I have a chance to come home and still play for a good team."

"I'm at the point where my family has to take preference, and my potential for establishing myself business-wise is a lot better in Kansas City. I know the people and they know me and I enjoy being with them."

Allen averaged 14.6 points in 78 games with the Lakers this past season.

"I feel that this give us the strongest nucleus we have had since the franchise moved to Kansas City," said Kings General Manager Joe Axelson. "We hate to part with Ollie Johnson, who has made a great contribution to our club, but the need for three outstanding scoring guards made the move important to the future."

The Kings are expected to draft Houston guard Otis Birdsong this week to go with Allen and Ron Boone.

"Allen will give us the ideal running mate to compliment Boone and Birdsong," said Kings Coach Phil Johnson. "He has the ability to penetrate, score and run a club. His experience, quickness and court savvy will undoubtedly strengthen our backcourt for the coming years."

Finley throws out baseballs, ideas

CHICAGO (AP) — There are three things that Charles O. Finley particularly dislikes — white baseballs, baseball commissioners and red ink.

To his mind, they are all related, contributing to the demise of the great national pastime.

"What baseball needs is leadership," the maverick owner of the Oakland A's told 160 sports editors, taking another pot shot at Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "The stupidity of most of the club owners is unbelievable."

To illustrate his point,

Charlie O. brought along three plastic baseballs of garish orange and tossed them among the luncheon guests at The Associated Press Sports Editors convention. The balls were fielded nicely.

"See," he said, "if they had been white, you would have dropped all three."

The controversial Oakland boss then proceeded to present his own private prescription to rescue the game, to wit: (1), orange baseballs for better visibility; (2), a walk on three balls instead of four; (3), pinch hitters; (4), interleague play.

"In football, it's 11 men against 11," he said, "In basketball, five against five; in hockey six against six. In baseball, it's one against nine — one man out there with a bat."

"The catcher and pitcher go into cahoots on how to stop the batter. Then they send the signals out to the guys in the field. The trouble with baseball is it is out of balance. The offense ought to be balanced with the defense."

Finley insisted that baseball must break the stranglehold of tradition and "get a shot in the arm — it ought to be where the action is."

"We can't have a notary running baseball," he added, referring to Kuhn, a lawyer. "We've got to have someone who understands the game."

He said he had a half dozen in mind but wouldn't name them.

Finley is a long time adversary of the baseball establishment, a paid-up tenant in the commissioner's dog house. He has just appealed a $3.5 million suit which went against him Kuhn's voiding of a sale of three 1976 players. He says he is preparing another suit but refuses to give details.

Finley acknowledged he made a mistake in moving his franchise to Oakland from Kansas City and was convinced that the Bay Area could not support the A's as well as the San Francisco Giants.

The team never drew well, he said, even when it was winning five division titles and three straight World Series in the early 1970s.

Those were the years that Finley had players such as Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi, Gene Tenace, Rollie Fingers, Sal Bando and Bert Campaneris, who all have gone to other clubs in the mammoth free agent turnover.

"We had no superstars on that team," Finley said. "What we had was a player above average at every position. Now these guys have scattered and look what happens when they don't have all of that help."

"Take Rudi, that cowboy (Gene Autry, California Angels) told Rudi 'I'll give you $1 million bonus and $1 million for the next five years' and Milwaukee paid $1.7 million for Bando. He was the worst fielding third baseman I ever saw."

Blazers' style the key to playoff win: Erving

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "I still think we have a championship team," said Philadelphia superstar Julius Erving, the consummate court artisan. "We have a better team than Portland. We have more talent and more depth."

But the Portland Trail Blazers — not the Philadelphia 76ers — are the National Basketball Association champions, and Erving knows why.

"They are cohesive," he said. "They help each other out better than we do. Their consistency enabled them to win."

"They have mental conditioning that they've developed in practices all year. They stuck with their basic game plan, the one they had been successful with all year."

"We attack defenses and try to create things. It was a matchup of opposing styles, and theirs won out."

The Blazers won because, for all his individual brilliance, Erving could not end until Sunday's final game of the best-of-seven series, won by Portland 109-107 to give the Blazers the title four games to two.

George McGinnis was in a woeful slump which did not end until Sunday's final game of the best-of-seven series, won by Portland 109-107 to give the Blazers the title four games to two.

Doug Collins played well until the last two games, when he tailed off badly. Centers Caldwell Jones and Darryl Dawkins were inconsistent, key reserves Lloyd Free and Steve Mix were hampered by injuries and playmaker Henry Bibby had trouble keeping pace with Portland's speedier guards.

So, the team which had been conceded the championship by some people back in October, when Erving was purchased from the New York Nets, came up two victories short.

And the man who will take most of the heat for that shortcoming is Coach Gene Shue, who all along warned against expecting too much too soon.

"It takes time and hard work to mold a winning team," said Shue over and over. "The players have to know each others' moves and styles. It doesn't happen overnight."

And at least partly because of the undisciplined, free-spirited nature of the players Shue had to work with, the 76ers never did develop the cohesiveness that was so much a part of the Blazers' victory plan.

"My philosophy is to play classic basketball, with great passes and great defense," said Shue, describing concisely the game played by Portland. "But you have to coach the players you end up with."

"Naturally I would love to have a Bill Walton," Shue said.

NHL governors to consider Barons

MONTREAL (AP) — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors was to convene the formal segment of its convention today and attempt a final resolution of the continued troubles of the Cleveland Barons.

The governors were to listen to George Gund, who might be willing to purchase the Barons in partnership with Sanford Greenberg, owner of the team's Richfield Coliseum home arena.

Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players

Association, said Monday he had heard that Greenberg had decided to withdraw from a reported deal. He said that Mel Swig, who bought the club from the league during the summer of 1975, would fold the franchise if that was the case.

"George Gund is supposed to fly in here," said Gordon Ritz, governor of the Minnesota North Stars. "He is going to make some kind of proposal. Then we are going to decide whether it is feasible for the club to start and finish the 1977-78 season."

Once the Barons' matter was discussed, there was to be a report by NHL Referee in Chief Scotty Morrison. His report was not expected to take up much time, but the Cleveland problem would, so

The Barons lost more than $2 million last year after moving from Oakland, where they were known as the California Seals.

One of the major concerns the league has is the Barons' debt to Charles O. Finley, who sold the club to the NHL in 1974.

Once the Barons' matter was discussed, there was to be a report by NHL Referee in Chief Scotty Morrison. His report was not expected to take up much time, but the Cleveland problem would, so the governors might not get a chance to talk merger.

There was bound to be some heated words when the discussion began.

"I think there are some people on the extreme ends and there is a whole group in the middle," said Ritz. "The group in the middle wants to review any proposal."

"I would like to see the proposal our fact-finding committee has made with the WHA before I decide which way we are going to go."

Leading the pro-merger force is Ed Snider of the Philadelphia Flyers. The most outspoken anti-merger man has been Harold Ballard, president of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"I have been quite disturbed about this thing they call amalgamation or expansion," said Ballard. "It's not amalgamation, it's expansion. The survey I've made shows there are seven that are definitely not interested in the WHA."

The seven teams Ballard named Monday were the Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Black Hawks, the Leafs, Colorado Rockies and probably the New York Islanders.

But Seymour Knox of the Sabres said Monday night he had not made up his mind on the matter and was going into the discussions ready to listen. Sam Pollock, general manager of the Montreal Canadiens, was surprised "that people are going to vote yes or no about something they don't know about" after someone asked him about Ballard's stand.

"The whole thing is still in the talking stage. Everything is unofficial everywhere, but all the possibilities are still there."

Pollock would not say he favored expansion but added that "it doesn't cost anything to listen."

At wit's end

Football widow

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Where have you been?" asked my husband as I locked the front door.

"To my parent-without-partners meeting."

"Since when are you a single parent?"

"Since Howard Cosell found his voice. Parents-without-partners is a group of 200 women who discuss how we can compete with televised sports. Tonight was an important meeting. We are pressuring the heads of networks to either release our husbands from their grip or list them as legally dead so all of us will be free to probate the estates and remarry."

"You talk ridiculous."

"Believe me, we are not talking ridiculous. I read a story where next January, the Super Bowl is going to telecast the game during the dinner hour."

"Of course they are," said my husband. "Why, that game is expected to draw the highest ratings since 'Roots.'"

"I don't care if Kunta Kinte is playing quarterback, that game is not going to interfere with our dinner again."

"Answer me one question," he said. "Why is it women get so uptight when men watch a football game?"

"We read a poem tonight at the meeting from Melanie Ladner in Nederland, Texas, that says it all. Pay attention."

"When we stood at the altar and said, 'I do's,' I don't recall a football being there too."

When you needed some help to get your degree, Did football pitch in? No, friend, it was me.

When you sprained your ankle or got the flu,

Was football around to wait on you?

And what did football have to do,

With the kids who live here and look like you?

Football cares not if you live or you die,

Yet I rate so low and it rates so high,

When I took your name if I recall,

I changed it to Ladner, not Mrs. Football."

"You know what you sound like? A jealous shrew. You cannot believe there is something else on this earth that would bring pleasure to a husband, other than yourself. You resent the fact that something so basic and formless as a football can replace your standing ribs, turn a man on without so much as a fumble, keep him in a chair for five hours with simply the promise of coming back after the commercial. You're jealous!"

I tossed him a football. "Okay, Bionic Kidneys, you win. Here's your new roommate. You got four tries to make a first down. Incomplete passes, fumbles, and out of bounds all count."

That was six weeks ago. He still hasn't realized I'm gone. c. 1977 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Consumer agency outlook in doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would establish a federal agency to look out for the rights of consumers is in trouble. One of its House sponsors says it would be defeated if voted on today.

When introduced early in the session, the bill appeared to be headed for easy passage, partly because it was being supported for the first time by the White House.

But heavy lobbying by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and other business organizations has swayed congressmen away from the consumer legislation, which would create a new agency that would represent the public in hearings before other federal agencies.

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., a sponsor of the bill, said in an interview Monday: "As of this moment, we are probably 20 to 25 votes down in the House."

Rosenthal estimated that the opponents of the new consumer agency have spent around a half-million dollars in their lobbying campaign.

"I think we underestimated the power of the opposition. I must say that they have done a very good job," he said.

Rosenthal, chairman of a consumer subcommittee and a long-time supporter of the plan to create an agency dedicated to representing the public, said "I'm still optimistic. I think passage is likely, but it is not going to be easy. We have to do some missionary work in the House."

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., also a key supporter of the consumer agency, said the bill could pass by a comfortable margin in the Senate. "It looks like the (lobbying) pressure is concentrated in the House," he said.

Sponsors of the bill argue that consumers need to be represented before federal agencies and that business representatives dominate such proceedings with their lawyers and lobbyists. Consumer opinions do not get through to the agencies, sponsors say.

Opponents say the agency would only add another layer of bureaucracy that would increase the cost of doing business.

The House has passed bills three times to set up a consumer agency and the Senate has done so twice. But the bills never became law, primarily due to opposition from the administrations of Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford.

Other opponents of the bill include the National Association of Manufacturers, Grocery Manufacturers of America and the Business Roundtable.

New official

Gregory G. Williams, Monsees Lake Estates, has been named Southwestern Bell Telephone's chief deskman in Sedalia, local Bell office manager Ken Hartung announced Tuesday. As chief deskman, Williams is in charge of the office that receives customer repair calls and dispatches repairmen to clear the trouble. A native of Vienna, Mo., Williams graduated from the University of Missouri-Rolla, with a degree in mechanical engineering.

Walking, diet your best bet

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 61 years old, 5 feet 3 and I weigh 170 pounds. I would so like to lose some weight, especially around my hips and stomach. I had a complete hysterectomy six weeks ago and I am afraid to do exercises. Could you help me on this problem?

I have become very depressed and discouraged. I have high blood pressure and my nerves are about gone.

Dear Reader — It is wise not to do exercises that involve an area where surgery has been done until your doctor tells you it is O.K. for you. That means you will need to wait on doing sit ups and leg lifts. But if you feel fairly good you could start a walking program.

Start by walking 15 minutes a day and gradually increase it until you can walk an hour every day. If you have time you may be able to walk even more. The more you can build up your walking program and keep it up the easier it will be for you to lose weight.

There is no such thing as spot reducing, despite all the money that is spent on this. If you lose fat you lose it because you are using more calories than you are taking in. Just doing sit ups or leg lifts will not decrease your weight around your hips and stomach unless you are losing fat all over. Such exercises sometimes help tighten up sagging muscles but that is about all.

I am sending you my weight losing diet that you can follow in The Health Letter number 4-7. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. The diet is a balanced 1200 calorie program that works best with doing some regular exercise too.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am a man of 69 and have a problem. The ring of muscles around my anus pop out after relieving myself and stay out. In order to be comfortable I have to push them back in several times a day.

My doctor tells me those are tired muscles and recommends surgery. There are so many drugs and other things to cure many ailments I would think some doctor or drug manufacturer would have found a salve or ointment which would make these muscles go back to normal.

Please advise me if there is such a salve or ointment so I would not have to have surgery.

Dear Reader — You are describing prolapse of the rectum. We all have layers of muscles attached to the large pelvic bones to hold in the abdominal contents. The pelvis is really like a basket with the upper part being the crest of the hip bones, and the bottom being the pubic arch in front and the bony structures you sit on. The bottom from the pubic arch to the areas you sit on are laced with muscles. These go around the rectum and genitalia and also support them.

These muscles are also connected to the muscles directly surrounding the rectum. When these muscles get weak a prolapse can occur.

There is no medicine for this as it is a mechanical problem. Your doctor is right, the only way the condition can be corrected is by surgery.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. (NEA)

House passes military bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House approved a $3.5 billion military construction bill Monday that would authorize increased U.S. war readiness in Europe.

The bill, approved 351 to 24 and sent to the Senate, also authorizes — for the first time — installation of utility meters on service families' government houses to cut down energy use.

It also includes $19.5 million for U.S. military construction in South Korea without regard to President Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. ground forces from that country in the next four-to-five years.

The bill is the regular annual authorization for construction contracts and commitments for worldwide U.S. military installations during the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

It would authorize President Carter's full $110 million request for increasing U.S. ammunition supplies in Europe and building more maintenance depots for war-readiness weapons already there.

It contains $41 million more than Carter asked for chemical weapons security and directs that the money be used to improve security at chemical weapon storage sites within the United States.

It also would authorize $161 million to install the utility meters in service family housing and authorize the Pentagon to set some ceiling on government-paid utilities.

The House Armed Services Committee said the Pentagon estimates the meters will cut overall military energy costs $93 million a year.

But while the bill would authorize $3.5 billion worth of military construction, an appropriations bill going to the House floor week after next would fund only $2.8 billion of that.

Congress must approve separate bills to first authorize federal spending and then appropriate funds for it.

The appropriations bill contains no money for construction in Korea pending a final decision by Carter on his troop pullout plan, and indirectly cuts $70 million for the war-readiness buildup in Europe.

Ashcroft, development enter into agreement

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft announced Monday that his office has entered into a voluntary compliance agreement with the developers of Lake St. Clair requiring them to provide water for lot owners.

Ashcroft reached the agreement with Authorized Investors Group, Inc., which does business as Lake St. Clair, and operates a residential and recreational land development in Franklin County. Ashcroft said he sought the agreement after receiving a number of complaints.

The agreement requires Lake St. Clair to pay for maintaining and operating water systems until it can extend water mains from a public utility to the lots. The lot owner will pay the necessary costs of connecting to the mains.

Under the agreement, Lake St. Clair will provide prospective buyers with information on utilities available to lot buyers.

The agreement is the result of an investigation into land and lake developments in Missouri. Other land developments are under investigation for possible violations of the deceptive merchandising practices statutes, Ashcroft said.

K.C. zoo gets new ape

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sedated to the edge of oblivion, Big Mac flew into Kansas City Monday, the newest addition to the Kansas City Zoo.

About 40 persons gathered for Big Mac's arrival in a private jet as he was delivered into the custody of Jack Armstrong, zoo director.

A 350-pound product of the San Diego Wild Animal Park, Big Mac's main job will be to sire offspring with the zoo's two female gorillas.

"He's never mated before, so our buying him was a calculated risk," said Harry Gregory, zoological curator. "In San Diego he was in sort of a backup position. They had some older males who mated, and so he was kept in another area away from the females."

Cops raid pornography warehouse

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The co-managers of a mid-city warehouse allegedly containing an estimated $250,000 worth of pornographic material have been arrested and ordered to appear at a hearing before a circuit court judge.

Police said the arrests and sealing off of material contained within the warehouse came Monday as the culmination of an investigation which began in January.

Material for which a search warrant will be sought at a Wednesday hearing before Judge Clyde S. Cahill includes magazines, paperback books and films to be distributed across the country, police said.

Under terms of the hearing notice, the co-managers are prohibited from moving or destroying the contents of the Allstar News, Inc., warehouse.

Arrested and booked on suspicion of violating state laws against obscene material were Jackie Ellis, 37, and Wesley T. Graves, 25, the firm's co-managers.

In addition, five employees were arrested and booked on distributing pornographic pornography, police said.

Steel firms charged with price fixing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three steel companies face a maximum $50,000 fine on charges handed down Monday of fixing prices for reinforcing steel bars sold in western Missouri and Kansas from 1963 to 1972.

Named in the indictments returned in U.S. District Court in Kansas City were the Armco Steel Corp., of Middletown, Ohio; the Ceco Corp., of Chicago and the Carter Waters Corp., of Kansas City.

Also named defendants were Edwin F. Anderson, Armco's manager of reinforcing products; Herbert R. Stockton, general manager of Armco's construction products division; and Richard F.

Newlin, president of Carter Waters.

The individuals could be sentenced to a maximum one year in prison and fined $50,000.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to divide the market and stabilize the price for reinforcing steel bars.

Disaster relief main objective of agency

"We try to do everything necessary within the framework of the law to get a community back on its feet," Bob Bouffard, individual assistance officer of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, told members of the Sedalia Rotary Club at noon Monday at the Ramada Inn. His talk concerned the help given to Sedalia and Pettis County citizens following the May 4 tornado.

In discussing what constitutes a major disaster, he noted the federal agency believes that smaller types of disaster should be planned and provided for in advance by all communities, but if the disaster gets beyond the scope of a community to handle it, the community should first turn to the next higher division of government, the county. However, if the problem is beyond the ability of the city and the county, then the community should turn to the state. If the disaster is of average size, then the state should be able to handle it, but if it is of such magnitude that the state needs assistance, the governor has to make a request for federal disaster assistance, as was done after tornadoes damaged a three-county area last month.

Bouffard noted that when a disaster strikes a community the federal agency generally makes a quick survey of damage even before the governor requests assistance. The object of that is to get into a position to be of service as soon as the president declares a major disaster that puts the additional resources from the rest of the country to work.

Bouffard said his agency found the people of this area to be self-reliant, as they are in most of the Mid-western states, and reluctant to request help. As an example, he said after a survey of damaged homes here, he advised the Small Business Administration to expect requests for low cost, long term loans for home and businesses to number about 150. However, to date the requests have only numbered seven for home rebuilding and two for businesses.

He noted the insurance factor was very high here and most homes were adequately covered with insurance to handle needed rebuilding and repairs.

In reply to a question, Bouffard stated there were 50 to 55 major disasters in the country each year that were so declared by the president.

The program was arranged by Jack Osborn, who introduced the speaker. Bill Gogerty, club secretary, presided over the meeting in the absence of club president Larry McRoy, who, with six other club members and their wives, are attending the Rotary International Conference in San Francisco.

Guests introduced by Bob Wolf were David Eshelman and Earl Uhler, Warrensburg Rotarians; Rev. Herman Hudson, of Odessa and Sedalia, who is the newly appointed pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church here, who was a guest of Kirk McCrary; and Greg Williams, Sedalia, a guest of Dick Lehmer.
